8.0 Examiner's Statement of Reasons for Allowance:

Upon reconsideration of the reference to Scott et al [US 6,385,235 B1] (hereafter Scott), it is noted that Figures 6A and 6B are given as examples of circuits suitable to derive power from the signals transferred by capacitors 705, 706. It is further noted that these examples are presumed to give the output voltage suitable for Scott's clock recovery circuit, and that this voltage is not a doubled voltage, i.e., the circuits of Figures 6A, 6B are not voltage doubler circuits. Since these circuits and their associated output voltages are presumed adequate for Scott's use, and no deficiency or need for higher voltage or power is disclosed or known by the Examiner, it is agreed that no motivation exists for using a voltage doubler in the diode bridge/power recovery circuits 6A, 6B of Scott et al.

The claims have been re-numbered as follows:

CLAIMS NUMBER (ORIGINAL)	CLAIMS NUMBER (FINAL)
